SENATOR ROBINSON: How do you know their own thing isn't correct?

SENATOR HILLMAN: Because they tell us it's not, it isn't connect to the system they want, and they're asking for information. You know, we're not necessarily doing...

SENATOR ROBINSON: Okay, hold it...hold it right there. Oh...

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...this because we think it's wonderful...

SENATOR ROBINSON: ...it's your time. I guess it's all right.

SENATOR HILLMAN: ...for the state, we're doing it for a request from these individuals. And this is my time, Senator Robinson, and so what they....

SENATOR ROBINSON: Well, you took a lot of mine, so I'm just trying to sneak in there.

SENATOR HILLMAN: Yes.

SENATOR WESELY: Senator Hillman, your time is up.

SENATOR HILLMAN: Thank you.

SENATOR WESELY: Thank you. Okay. Senator Wehrbein, you're next, followed by Senator Hartnett, Senator Robinson, Senator Witek.

SENATOR WEHRBEIN: Mr. Speaker and members of the body, I...Joyce, I think, is on the right track, and I...she's saying many of these things that I think need to be saying, and probably been said over and over. Oh, I didn't get what I wanted. I...but I want to make comments on this. I think this is very needful, and I do understand that many think it's going to be very complicated, and I think it is unfortunate. The trouble is, we have many, many players across the state, and technology coming, and so in order to bring as many as we can to the table, this does appear to be quite large and I would acknowledge somewhat complicated. I'm concerned about that,
